

Health & Safety for your business.

Whether you have two or twenty employees, health & safety issues in the workplace are very important; not just to the large organisation but to every company.

Your employees have the right to work in safe conditions with regard to personal health and it is therefore important that you offer them this in your workplace. Failure to do so can result in personal injury, disease or general poor health. Such occurrences can result in legal action being taken against you and/or your business, which could damage the business financially and its reputation.

The saying of 'prevention is better than cure' fits the bill perfectly for ensuring a disaster does not strike your organisation.

The implementation of correct policies & procedures also help build inter-working-relationships and improve profitability.

Our aim at the National Health & Safety Company Ltd is to ensure you become and then remain compliant with all legislative requirements.

Our company head office may be in Scotland but our team of technically qualified consultants cover the UK.

National Coverage – local delivery.

We will keep you on the right track with our 'hands-on' guidance and support in the completion of all necessary Risk, COSHH and Disability Discrimination audits and assessments.

Everything you require in the way of policies, procedures, audits, risk assessments, and H&S training is provided.

We will introduce, monitor and control an effective system of work that will reduce the possibility of serious accidents happening within your workplace.

Are you compliant with all aspects of Employment Law and Health & Safety legislation?

Your responsibility as an employer as stated in the 'Health & Safety at Work act 1974' is to protect the health, safety and welfare of yourself, your employees and people that may be affected by what you do, such people include:

- Visitors to your workplace.
- The public that use your services or product.
- Neighbours.
- Sub-contractors.

In other words you need to control any risks that arise in your workplace and from the work itself that may result in poor health and/or injury.

We take pride in ensuring you achieve and maintain compliance at a price that is in the realms of your business budget.
